Introduction

A technical report is more than just a presentation of facts about a given situation. An effective report can motivate people to take the desired course of action. Moreover, the quality of a report can influence how its subject matter is perceived by the reader. In this course, we will explore the different types of reports, learn how to structure and scope reports from inception to completion, and understand how to write for a specific audience with a clear purpose. Finally, we will delve into a logical approach to developing visual aids that support the representation of facts, conclusions, and recommendations that comprise the report.

This course provides the essential report writing skills needed for creating both business and technical reports that meet readers' requirements. We will cover best practices in management reports, project management reports, and provide the necessary tools to ensure reliable, evidence-based reports.

Course Objectives

By the end of this course, participants will be able to:

- Write purposeful business and technical reports that meet the needs of the audience and drive decision-making.
- Utilize various templates and report types to achieve reporting objectives, including management reports and project management reports.
- Effectively generate reliable conclusions by researching, analyzing, and organizing information.
- Provide evidence-backed recommendations that support management decisions.
- Use visual aids appropriately to enhance the presentation of information in reports.
- Apply advanced methodologies to ensure that each report is impactful and meets high standards.
