Code: LM28 From: 16 - 20 February 2026 City: Barcelona (Spain) Fees: 4400 Pound

Introduction

The seminar titled "Managing Relations Between Business Leaders and Labor Representatives" is designed to provide participants with comprehensive knowledge and practical skills to navigate and enhance the relationship between business leaders and labor representatives within organizations. This course will dive into the dynamics, challenges, and strategies essential for fostering positive and constructive engagement between these two critical stakeholders.

Effective relation management is crucial to ensuring smooth communication and collaboration in any workplace. This course focuses on enhancing public relations management skills, including crisis management and conflict resolution, to build a foundation of trust and collaboration. Participants will also gain a clear understanding of the role of a public relations manager and how they can contribute to shaping a harmonious working environment.

Course Objectives

The Managing Relations Between Business Leaders and Labor Representatives seminar aims to achieve the following objectives:

- Understand the Roles and Perspectives of Business Leaders and Labor Representatives: Participants will gain valuable insights into the roles, responsibilities, and goals of both business leaders and labor representatives. By understanding each party's perspective, participants can develop empathy and a broader understanding of their respective challenges.
- Enhance Communication and Negotiation Skills: Effective communication is key in managing relations between business leaders and labor representatives. This seminar will focus on improving participants' communication and negotiation skills to engage in constructive dialogue, resolve conflicts, and reach mutually beneficial agreements.
- Develop Conflict Resolution Strategies: Conflict is inevitable in the employer-employee relationship. Participants will learn various conflict resolution techniques and strategies for managing and resolving disputes. Methods for fostering collaboration, finding common ground, and maintaining a harmonious working environment will be explored.
- Promote Trust and Collaboration: Trust and collaboration are essential elements of any strong relationship. Participants will learn strategies to build trust, foster positive interactions, and promote collaboration between business leaders and labor representatives. The focus will be on creating an inclusive, cooperative environment benefiting both parties.
- Understand Legal and Regulatory Frameworks: Labor relations are governed by various legal frameworks. This seminar will provide participants with an overview of relevant laws, regulations, and best practices. Participants will gain a solid understanding of compliance requirements and the legal implications of managing labor relations effectively.
