Code: CT28 From: 2 - 6 November 2025 City: Manama Fees: 4400 Pound

Introduction

Corporate governance and risk management are critical areas that have recently attracted more attention in business schools and among legislators, with this trend continuing to grow. While different models exist for corporate governance and risk management, all of them aim to structure the relationship between the organization and its stakeholders, while effectively controlling risks. More importantly, "Governance, Risk Management, Compliance, and Effective Internal Controls" are all interconnected within one system. Unfortunately, not all companies adopt this forward-thinking approach. This course explores the structure of boards, committees, and their functions, while also covering the detailed process of managing risks according to the Committee of Sponsoring Organizations of the Treadway Commission COSO guidelines. Additionally, the course covers internal controls used to respond to risks in various areas of the organization, along with compliance as per the latest developments.

Course Objectives

- Define corporate/public governance and its relation to risk management and internal controls.
- Understand the roles and responsibilities of various stakeholders in private or public organizations.
- Identify and compare different corporate governance models and their functions.
- Understand risk management areas and how both internal and external environmental changes affect these areas.
- Identify appropriate controls to implement across different business cycles to ensure compliance and mitigate risk.
