Contemporary Public Diplomacy

Code: PR32 From: 8 - 12 March 2027 City: Brussels (Belgium) Fees: 5200 Pound

Introduction

In today's interconnected and rapidly changing world, Contemporary Public Diplomacy has become a vital tool for shaping national images, enhancing influence, and managing relations with global audiences. Public diplomacy is no longer limited to government-to-government channels; it now includes media, multinational corporations, cultural institutions, and even individual influencers who play significant roles in international communication.

This program is designed for executives, team leaders, and professionals across government and private institutions in the Middle East and North Africa. It equips participants with practical skills and analytical tools to understand the transformations in international relations, the rise of soft power, and the use of modern communication strategies. Participants will gain the ability to manage reputation, handle crises, and strengthen international cooperation in alignment with institutional and national objectives.
