Stakeholder Communication and Relationship Management

Code: LM32 From: 13 - 17 July 2026 City: Vienna (Austria) Fees: 5200 Pound

Introduction

The Stakeholder Communication and Relationship Management course focuses on building effective communication practices with internal and external stakeholders. Organizations often deal with different groups that influence decisions, projects, services, and business outcomes. Managing these relationships requires clear communication, structured engagement, expectation management, and the ability to handle different interests professionally.

This course provides a practical understanding of how to identify stakeholders, analyze their needs, manage communication channels, and build productive working relationships. It also covers how to deal with sensitive situations, conflicting expectations, communication gaps, and relationship risks that may affect organizational performance or project success.

The course is delivered over five connected days. It begins with the fundamentals of stakeholder communication, then moves into stakeholder analysis and engagement planning, communication tools and message design, relationship management and conflict handling, and finally performance measurement and continuous improvement.
