Code: HR32 From: 16 - 19 December 2026 City: New York City (USA) Fees: 4700 Pound

Introduction

Employee engagement and workplace motivation are essential elements for building productive teams, improving employee satisfaction, and strengthening organizational performance. In today's competitive work environment, organizations need more than policies and procedures; they need a culture that inspires employees, supports commitment, and encourages people to contribute their best.

This 4-day course is designed to provide participants with practical strategies and tools to enhance employee engagement, improve motivation, and create a positive workplace culture. The course focuses on understanding what drives employees, how leadership influences engagement, and how organizations can design effective initiatives that improve loyalty, performance, and retention.

Participants will explore key engagement drivers, motivation techniques, recognition practices, employee feedback tools, engagement surveys, and continuous improvement methods. Through practical exercises, case discussions, and applied activities, participants will learn how to identify engagement gaps, design motivation plans, and build work environments that support long-term employee commitment.

By the end of this course, participants will be able to develop and implement practical employee engagement and motivation initiatives that improve morale, productivity, and organizational success.
