Introduction

Succession planning and management is a critical process that enables organizations to maintain stability and continuity in key roles. It focuses on identifying and preparing individuals to take on essential positions when transitions occur. This approach helps reduce risks associated with sudden vacancies and ensures that operations continue without disruption.

Organizations today operate in dynamic environments where leadership gaps, talent shortages, and workforce changes can directly impact performance. Without a structured succession plan, organizations may struggle to respond effectively to these challenges.

This course provides a practical framework for developing and implementing succession planning strategies. It focuses on identifying critical roles, assessing current capabilities, and preparing future leaders through structured development plans. Participants will gain the tools needed to align succession planning with organizational goals and improve long-term workforce readiness.
